Message from the CEO, Mr. David Allison

SSAT Middle East is an educational consultancy company working with schools across the Middle East, and around the world, to raise achievement for all students. Our resources are focused on working with schools to benefit their learners.

Schools across the Middle East, and around the world, have said that working with SSAT has led to improvements in teaching and learning in their schools. Through involvement, they have gained contact with other schools and educators, enabling them to share relevant ideas and best educational practices.

SSAT is increasingly providing needs-based support tailored to the requirements of schools and their learners. Through evaluation processes, we support schools in the identification of their needs and priorities. Specific programmes are then created to address these key areas of development and support significant school improvement.

Mr. David Allison

Lead Practitioner[®]

SSAT Middle East's Lead Practitioner programme recognises the work of those who not only demonstrate outstanding expertise in their field but also lead colleagues to improve their practice, resulting in a positive impact on student learning. The LP accreditation has become a mark of high quality leadership of practice and provides a way of:

- promoting a structure for whole school improvement;
- attracting and retaining effective practitioners;
- valuing those who lead practice and want to continue as practitioners themselves.

LP accreditation acknowledges that leading practice can take place at different levels, from working with just one other colleague (beginning level) through to working with larger groups within a region and beyond (transforming and leading level).
